ishing real names. The undersigned having filled his store Let us say that Mr. Beverly was a merchant, wealthy, respected and influential, doing a business large enough to satisfy the ambition of an Astor or a Billy Grey. Previous to the fell swoop of fire fiend in Boston, his store reared its granite front on Franklin street and multitudinous and bulky were the bales and boxes that found daily transit to and from the busy mart.

In Mr. Beverly's employ were three clerks—George Actin, Philip Lewis, and Clarence Bugbee—who had entered to learn the mercantile business, and who had given promise of proficiency. The fact that they had been retained in the house a year or more, was proof positive to those who knew Mr. Beverly, that they were of industrious, steady habits, and ouths of promise. At home Mr. Beverly had among his children a daughter—Florence by name -who often came to the store, and whom the clerks had met at her father's house. These clerks could be gay and gallant on occasions, but never towards Florence Beverly. The feeling they entertained toward her was one akin to worship. In their heart they adored her afar off, giving her respectful attention, and prizing her smile of recognition as a priceless boon.

So far as the family connections of these three young men were concerned, they were all honorable, respected people, but none of them wealthy. Mr. Beverly was not accustomed to seek his trusted servants among those who had been reared in ease and luxury. On a certain occasion Mr. Beverly was heard to remark that he would rather Within two weeks from that time both Philip Lewis and Clarence Bugbee called upon Mr. Beverly, and asked for a loan of a hundred dollars each. They had been unable to find employment, and were in arrears for board. The merchant kindly gave them the money, and with fathorly advice touching care and economy.

One day after this, as Philip and Clarence were walking down the blackened track which had once been Franklin street, they saw a young man in a guernsey frock, working at a derrick amid the ruins of the old store, whom they thought they recognized. They crossed over, and found it to be their fellow-clerk, George Acton.

They were astonished and scandalized. "In mercy's name, George, what does good circumstances, which leads gossiphis mean? It is only an escapade of "No," answered Acton, wiping the

The visit of the Shah is now said to be merely a gigantic advertisment of Baron Reuter (a German Jew) in order to raise the wind for a Railroad from Russia through Persia, to India, for the construction of which he obtained the exclusive right from Persia some two years ago. The visit of the Shah to Europe was part of the contract, it is said; and the Baron has distanced Barnum, Ayres, Perry Davis, and Morrison, not only in the magnitude of his advertisement, but in making the Courts of Europe pay for it. This Railroad is to be the key both to Persia and India. The concession to construct it was obtained quietly from Persia, without the knowledge, or, at all events, opposition, of the English Minis-Incorrect versions of the law under which the members of the Forty-Third Congress are drawing their back pay in advance of being sworn in are in circulation. The law is a part of the bill increasing salaries, and provides that all members whose credentials in proper form are filed with the clerk, and where notice of a contest is not received, may receive their compensation monthlyfrom the beginning of their term until the beginning of the first session of Congress, and to avoid the difficulty presented by the old law of requiring a certificate of the Speaker. Since there is no Speaker and the clerk is the only officer of the House of Representatives for the new Congress who holds over, his certificate was made sufficient. All the members are now drawing $625 per month, except in contested cases. Nebraska Increment in Two Years, 68,935 I Total in 1872, 191,928.

BY PROF. . D. BUTLER.

LINCOLN, 1873.

Hume speaks of a Roman Emperor. who, wishing to learn something about the population of his metropolis, issued of the United States, to be opened on the 12th day of April, 1876, and to be closed on the 19th day of October, in a very large city. When Arthur Young Goods! A shock of an earthquake was felt at departments, he could devise no better wished to compare the different French method than to cut them out one by one from a map and then ascertain their comparative weights in a scale. One of the earliest modern examples of accurate enumeration throughout a wide country, was the United States census of 1791. Each new decade some new specifications have been added to those beore made.

The prosperity of a State is now measured, by all political economists, by its populational growth. Hence all States are prone to over-estimate the rapidity of their increase, and so at every census are mortified that their numbers are proved so few. So chagrined were several cities in 1870, that they paid for taking a second census in hopes to show that their inhabitants had not been all included in the government returns. The biennial census which was long taken by the State of Iowa, furnished to every Iowa editor an exhaustless treasury of items-never in the way, and never out of the way. In the absence of an oft repeated cen sus, there is an infinity of unchecked guessing and gassing, especially in new States where growth is most wondered at, being a transition from nothing to something

Accordingly, on the Atlantic slope, there is a great distrust of all reports concerning western progress, till they are confirmed by an official census. The Nebraska Superintendent of Immigration has estimated the influx into that State at 40,000 persons a year. His estimate has been much ridiculed as a wild exaggeration, of a piece with Yankee Doo dle's reckoning of the continental host, when his father and he went down to

Or Sugar-Coated Concentrated Root and Herbal Juice. Anti-Bilious Granules. The "LITTLE GIANT" CATHARTIC, or Multum in Parvo

The novelty of modern Medical, Chemical and Pharmaceutical Science. No use of any longer taking the large, repulsive and nauseous pills, composed of cheap, crude and bulky ingredients, when we can by a careful application of chemical science, extract all the cathartic and other medicinal properties from the most valuable roots and herbs, and concentrate them into a minute Granule, scarcely larger than a mustard seed, that can be reedily swallowed by those of the most sensitive stomachs and fastidious tastes. Each little Purgutive Pellet represents, in a most concentrated form, as much cathartic power as is embodied in any of the large pills found for sale in the drug shops. From their wonderful cathartic power, in proportion to their size, the poerje who have not tried them are apt to suppose that they are harsh or drastic in effect, but such is not at all the case, the different active medicinal principles of which they are composed being so harmonized and modified, one by the others, as to produce a most searching and thorough, yet gentle and Isindly operating cathartic.

The Fourth at Mexico Point.

Owing to the unfavorable state of the weather on Friday last, it became necessary to change, to some extent, the programme for the celebration of the Fourth of July at the lake shore. The rain during the morning cooled all the patriotic ardor which might, under other circumstances, have prompted the citizens of Mexico to gather in a body at the place appointed for the celebration. But clearing away of the storm and the brightness of the sunshine at midday were very inviting, and by 3 sent to Mr. Daniel Kloch, of this town, o'clock p. m., there was a goodly company gathered at the Point, a little way distant from the monument erected to the memory of SilasTowne, an aidde-camp to General Washington, and a successful spy during the American Revolution.

The chief feature of the celebration was the address delivered by Rev. Mr. Greeley of Oswego. He advocated the keeping in remembrance the anniversary of American independence—the celebraing of the day with fire-crackers, with demonstrations of joy. He briefly sketched the course of our nation's his tory for the past 97 years, and presented to the minds of his listeners many proofs that that way but not on this postal card. the hand of God is clearly discernible in all the events which are acknowledged by all to have been the turning points in our history. He claimed that this coun try of ours "is a great country," and brought forward an array of statistics in proof, that were enough to have convinced even the most skeptical as to the truth of an expression that has been by many considered an American boast. In conclusion, he spoke of the duty devolving upon American citizens to sustain the integrity and extend the benign influence of the free institutions with which Heaven has blessed them in their national government.

The address was one that well deserved the larger hearing it certainly would have had if the weather had been more favorable. Those who were fortunate enough to be there were evidently well repaid for the trouble of going, and the few hours of that afternoon enjoyed beside the quiet waters of Ontario will be remembered by them as a brief but pleasant celebration of Independence day.

The counterfeit fifty cent notes which are in circulation can be detected by holding the notes to the light, when one can see there is no silk fibre in the paper, but is simulated by irregular scratches on the plate, which gives the surface impression. The red treasury seal is also printed in ink, which will rub and blur over the paper if a person dampens his fingers and passes it over it.

A law passed at the late session of the Legislature, establishing a State Poor Department, making all indigent persons, not having resided in the town sixty days where they apply for assistance rendered chargable to the State, instead of direct to the towns.

The fashionable lady's fan of this season is something in size to startle the beholder. The delicately gloved hand of the fair one clasps it, when at rest, as if it were the handle of a base ball club, and oscillates it when in use with the unsteady motion of a street awning in a thunder storm,

Destructive Fire in Hannibal.

A destructive fire occurred in Hannial early on the morning of the third. It was discovered in the Town Hall, owned by Messrs. J. T. Rogers and J.B. Curtis. The upper story was occupied by Hannibal Lodge No. 550 F. and A. M. The basement by Co. B, 48th Regiment N. G. S. N. Y., as an armory, and Mrs. Preston and Robert Gibson as dwelling rooms. Rich Rust had rooms on the first floor, in which he had two billiard tables. The fire spread rapidly, and soon involved the Barruc block. That was occupied by H. Rowe, meat market; G. Clark, hardware store; N. B. Brower, law office; W. Cooper, Tailor; R. Gibon, barber; J. Draper, confectionery, and five families. The blacksmith shop west of the Town Hall soon caught fire and was destroyed, William Baxter was the owner. No insurance; loss about $600. G. # Reasons Why People prefer the Elias Howe Sewing Machine.

1st. It is more durable than any other nachine in market. Being easily redjusted to take up wear.

2d. The shuttle is large, and never wears out, as the wear all comes on the carrier, which is adjustable. 3d. The head is movable, permitting the needle being set as near the shuttle as possible—a very essential point when changing a coarse needle for a very fine one, thereby preventing stich-dropping or breaking needles. 4th. Bobbins can be filled without emoving the work, saving much time and wear of machine.

5th. Very easily threaded, as all the tension and thread guides are open. 6th. The tension never needs changing for the same thread, no matter what material sewed. Call at H. C. Beals' Potograph Gal

a Cholera Remedy.

The Journal of Commerce publishes the following receipt for cholera mixture, of which it says:

We have seen it in constant use for nearly two score years, and found it to be the best remedy for looseness of the bowels ever yet devised. It is to be commended for several reasons, It is not to be mixed with liquor, and therefor will not be used as an alcoholic beverage; its ingredients are well known among common people, and it will have no prejudice to combat. Each of the materials is in equal proportion to the others, and it may therefor be compounded without any professional skill; and as the dose is so very small, it may be carried in a tiny phial in the waistcoat pocket, and be always at hand. It is:

Tinct. opii. Capsici. Rhei co. Menth pip., Campho

Mix the above in equal parts; dose, ten to thirty drops. In plain terms, take equal parts tincture of opium, red pepper, rhubarb, peppermint and camphor, and mix them for use. In case of diarrhea, take a dose of ten to thirty drops in three or four teaspoonfnls of water. No one who has this by him, and takes it in time, will ever have the cholera. We commend it to our western friends, and hope that the receipt will be widely published. Even when no cholera is anticipated, it is an excellent remedy for ordinary summer complaint.

(From the Prattville Times.) Captain Jack. Yes, we think it i generally conceded that it requires a great amount of labor and thought to keep up a full stock in a Hardware Store even in a village no larger than ours; but B. S. Stone & Co. seem to be equal to the task, and notwithstanding their large sales, they manage to have goods coming in about as fast as they go out; so it is seldom you can inquire for any thing in their line that they cannot furnish at once. We do not speak of Messrs. Stone & Co. to "puff" them at all, but only to illustrate our subject. Shack Nasty Jim. Your views are in the main correct. It always pays a merchant to buy goods in as large quantities as he can safely handle, and he should as far as possible buy direct of the manufacturer. This saves a profit to the middleman, and generally insures fresh, good goods. As an illustration of our point we take pleasure in referring to the Hardware House of B. S. Stone & Co., of our village. They buy many of their goods in jobbing quantities of first hands, and thereby save 10 to 25 per cent., which they invariably give their customers the benefit of. # Star Spring Bed Bottom.

R. L. Smith is in town making sale for this new and superior bed bottom. It is of wooden slats extending length-wise of the bed, each upon springs of watch-spring, tempered steel wire. These are entirely separate, having no dependence whatever upon each other, and warranted. It will fit every bed. But its peculiar excellence is the invalid attachment whereby the body of the sufferermay be easily raised so as to rest at any angle he choses, or to a sitting posture. This attachment is also independent of the slats and springs, and is kept in the required position by ratchets. Physidans say, and common sense as well as experience dictates, that in every family there should be something of this kind, not only for the comfort of invalids but also for the convenience of nurses. Not ble goods, at every one can afford an extension chair, and in many cases the chair will not answer the purpose of the bed, while the cost of these is in comparison extremely light being only eight dollars. Our citizens should all see this and we feel sure that no one who can afford to buy it will regret its purchase. The bed bottom can be seen at the Empire Hotel,

DEATH OF JOEL B. PENFIELD.—Dispatches received in Oswego on Tuesday announced the death of Mr. Joel B.

"For many years Mr. Penfield has been one of our most prominent and successful business men and citizens. # Resurrection of the "Silent World."

A short time ago, when we pronounced a brief eulogy upon the "silent" remains of the lamented departed (as we sup posed forever) Silent World, we did not entertain the slightest hope that that paper would so soon be resurrected. But, contrary to all its readers' expectations, it proved to be but a tempor ary suspension, and on the first of July it rose Phenix-like from the ashes, as we see by the appearance of a copy of that paper in the hands of a neighbor of along the route as rapidly as possible. ours. Though it is not quite as large and printed on as nice paper as it used to be before it failed, it has much of its former appearance, and is equal in point of ability. Its subscrption is the same as before,($1.50 a year,) and it is published semi-monthly by Messrs. Hotchkiss & Ellegood, the latter of whom, hailing as a graduate from the Pennsylvania Institution, has furnished aid to re-start the paper.

An office separate from the National Deaf-mute college has been secured in the city of Washington in which the paper will be published. Of this office Mr. Ellegood, who has had long experience as a printer in the Government Printing office, undertakes the whole business

In our comments on the decease of the Silent World in our issue of March 6th last, while we conceded its faults and impolitic blunders in its short and unsuccessful career, we as fully commended its virtues, and now as it is again presentits virtues, and now as it is again presenting itself to the public, we doubt not it will improve upon its past virtues and be a "shining star" among the deaf mute papers. We shall be much pleased to velcome it back as one of our exchanges.

Acquittal.—The committee appointto investigate the charges against Mr. Warring Wilkinson, Principal of the California Institution for the Deaf. Dumb and Blind, of which mention was made in a late number of the Journal, have filed a report entirely exonerating him from the charges. This is what we anticipated would be the result.

Passages in the Life of a Deaf Mute.

George soon saw that the life of a gold miner was not the one for him. In other things he might have talent and even genius, but in gold digging he had neither, no, not even the poor consola-tion of being in luck. So he resolved to return to America. A ship was in port and the Captain was well known to George, in fact they were firstrate friends. To him, George, therefore, applied for a passage home.

"Have you any money?" inquired the Captain.

"No! not a dollar," answered George. "That's too bad," said the Captain,

"but you can work can't you?" Of course George could work, and he was busy the next few weeks in shipping cargo. The captain informed him that he could not return to America, inside of two years, because he had to deliver and receive a cargo at several various and widely separated ports of the world. George did not object. He had a good place in the ship and was of much use to the Captain on the long voyage from port to port. They went to China, unloaded the old and received a new cargo; then they sailed for the Cape of Good Hope and staid there for sometime, then they went to Spain, and to other countries. While on the ocean one of the officers of the ship died, and as they were within three hundred miles of St. for which he was destined. He immediately went to his old employer, Hopper, and found the gentleman very glad to see him, he was quickly offered his old place and old wages, and began to work at the trade of gilding once more. It was a spectacle worthy of commiser ation to see the flying grey-backs and pursuing Yankees galloping along through clouds of almost suffocating dust, under a fiery July sun, blazing with relentless fury overhead. John, who was one of arduous exertions and injurious expos ure, had his hands so badly sun-burned that the skin peeled off. After this wild goose chase was over; John reoccupied his editorial chair and wrcte a lengthy editorial, sharply criticizing Gen. Morgan's course in stealing horses, in which he characterized him as his power he would hang him to the highest gibbet to be found. The course of events again led Gen. Morgan and his band into John's village; whereupon he immediately issued an order to institute a search for John's person but thwarted in his purpose by the timely warning John received from his friends, who entreated him for their own sake not to risk his life by remaining in the village and exhorted him to fly for his safety with all possible dispatch.

John at first declined to follow their advice, thinking he might thereby lose some of his reputation for personal courage, but he afterwards changed his mind and consented to flee for dear life. Before John started he noticed a personal friend of his, who was one of Gen. Morgan's men, pacing up and down the street in front of his hotel and casting suspicious glances at him as he passed by; this was done several times, until he went around the corner as if to procure a guard in order to arrest John. At this, John printer, died a few days since in a cell in the Madison street station, from the efstep as if nothing unusual was about to on the Northwestern Christian Advocate, the village, when he began to walk quite in this city this morning: happen to him, until he got a mile from that was unearthed by the police officials other village, scrambling over rugged

After the rebels had exhausted the contents of the wine cellar, they left the tavern, leaving a helpless wounded soldier, also leaving John to reflect as he might upon his hair breadth escape. At this juncture, John, instead of proceeding further, returned home; but was again forced to leave at the earnest solicitation of his friends. He took the same route and proceeded in the manner as at first deaf and dumb. Great was the relief he felt and freely did he breathe, when at last he found himself safe within the protecting arms of "Uncle Sam," and that too at the expense of his printing office which was destroyed by the rebels. Surely John relished not the idea of having his head in the hangman's halter. He valued his head on his shoulders, in proper fix, far more than such paltry considerations as a printing office. The rebels to show their spite had torn down a large beautiful flag, which floated over his office and trampled it in the dust, and then tore it into many small pieces and fastened them on their horses' tails. John, when he reached the city just mentioned, was again enlisted in the home guards and was once obliged to spend a night in camp, lying on the cold bare ground without a wink of sleep. Afterwards, through the assistance of his friends, he managed to secure a lucrative situation by means of which, he succeeded in partially retrieving his fortune. - Mute's Chronicle.

Adjoining Mohn's hat factory, on Maple street, below Chestnut, stands a small two story frame house, No. 232, occupied fields, several times seeing Morgan's men by W. Hafner, shoemaker, and family. Information was received at the Mayor's office, to the effect that a poor child was receiving grossly inhuman treatment at that place. This morning Chief Cullen and others visited the premises. Hafner was at work, and his wife, another female and baby occupied the rear room. Chief Cullen made his errand known, and Mrs. Hafner said that her little daughter was up in her bed room, that she was subject long, however, before a door leading up a narrow stairway was opened. The par ty ascended a filthy flight of steps, uncarpeted, to a low, narrow, small, filthy apartment under the roof. The sight in the room was horrible In one corner upon an old wooden box was curled up like a dog a young girl aged about 12 years. She was rolling in filth, and there was nothing on her but an old calico dress. She had no stockiugs, skirts, shoes or collar; nothing save a common thin calico skirt. The floor was horribly filthy, and the room without ventilation. The poor girl is lutely filthy, her limbs appearing as if they had not been washed for years. Her nails are long and her hair is cropped off very short.

When the party entered she raised up and stared, and probably looked upon the first strange faces she had seen for years. She could not speak a word. Her hands were scarred in several places, and her face was dirt begrimed and scaly with filth. She appeared as if she had. been wallowing in dirt like some animal in a pen. The officers of the law, accustomed to many hard sights, shut out the stench from their nostrils, and stood in amazement as they looked upon the deplorable spectacle. After hearing the evidence, Mayor Evans remarked that it was almost beyoud belief that so terrible case of inhumanity and neglect could exist in this city, and in view of the facts set forth, he felt justified in holding the stepfather and mother of the child each in $1,000 bail to answer at court.

At this announcement the mother burst into tears, while the dumb girl gazed around upon the people assembled in the office, not knowing what was going on. Her body appears to be covered with burns received from falling on a stove. She is perfectly stiff, and Sergeant Lutz was compelled to carry her about from place to place wherever she was wanted

The unnatural parents are said to own the property they live in, and earned sufficient money to properly care for the unfortunate girl. Hafner and wife were committed to jail in default of bail, the Keeps always on hand a large stock of woman taking her baby with her. The girl, together with other children, will be taken to the poor house. An order was Near the foot of the hill, over which he issued to have the premises thoroughly
